160 pages PDF

The study brings together stories and analyses of migrant workers, who struggle to settle down, from six different countries in Asia Pacific.

(This is the second book that has come out of the collaborative work of the Jesuit Conference of Asia Pacific MigrationNetwork.)

The different experiences bring to the surface not only the hardship but also ingenuity of migrants and the hospitality of host societies.

The book, indeed, brings up questions related to both host and home countries settling/resettling:

1- What are the practical ways that civil society actors can support to improve integration?

2- What does repatriation actually mean for migrant workers?
